You're Not Even Alive

Draw me a wise thin as blood And I watch it dance on a ballroom floor Send me peaches from afternoon I know horses that lie to be damned Baby I'm blessed with a putty knife Trying to find a window in the painted sand, oh It's my duty to find you happy today Just as I'm tearing your life away Caught around an avalanche Look at the snow discolored blanch I tried to lift you underneath an elm tree But you wanted to go back Painting all your treasures black
