

Time Heals

Jason Donovan

It seems all promises are made to be broken Anyone in love would know what I mean Nothing seems to change the words that are spoken Nothing I could say could ever bring her back to me Happens all the time, it's only love and emotion Why it means so much, I can't understand Everywhere I look I'm seeing lovers in motion Do they realise they have to make another plan

People try to tell me
that time heals, time heals
but I think it takes a long, long time
They kept on trying to tell me
that time heals, time heals
but I'm not too sure about this heart of mine

And all the time I'm thinking what happened to us We used to talk and try and work things out We were in love, and everybody that knew us said we were together, they never had a doubt Maybe there are words that can explain what I'm feeling Everybody tells me it gets better in time I keep on looking for the rhyme or the reason but I don't get the answers to this question of mine

People try to tell me
that time heals, time heals
but I think it takes a long, long time
They kept on trying to tell me
that time heals, time heals
but I'm not too sure about this heart of mine

People try to tell me
that time heals, time heals
but I think it takes a long, long time
They kept on trying to tell me
that time heals, time heals
but I'm not too sure about this heart of mine

People try to tell me
that time heals, time heals
but I think it takes a long, long time
They kept on trying to tell me
that time heals, time heals
but I'm not too sure about this heart of mine

People try to tell me
but I think it takes a long, long time
They kept on trying to tell me
time heals, time heals
but I'm not too sure about this heart of mine
