Begin Again

Jason Gray

This one goes out to you If you gave all you had and it wasn't enough It goes out to you If you're afraid you've failed everybody you've loved It goes out to you If the ties that bind are coming undone And you're so tired that you wanna give up

There's never been a night so long... There's never been a life too far gone When you come to the end, you can begin again

This one goes out to you When you got the call and it wasn't good news It goes out to you When there's nothing more that you can do It goes out to you When everything sad isn't coming untrue And every dream you chased got away from you

There's never been a night so long... There's never been a life too far gone When you come to the end, you can begin again

It's never too late for a new start If you give God the pieces of your broken heart When you come to the end, you can begin again

Arise, my love, the winter's past, the spring has come! He makes all things beautiful in time After the fire, what remains is the love that will not change And makes all things beautiful in time

It's never too late for a new start No matter how your life's been torn apart When you're at the end, you can begin again

There's never been a night so long... There's never been a life too far gone When you come to the end, you can begin again

Oh, when you come to the end, you can begin again
