I moved into this room, if you could call it that, a week ago.

I never do what I'm supposed to do.

I hardly even know my name anymore.

When no one calls it out, it kinda vanishes away.

I can't get to sleep at night. The parking lot's so loud and bright.

The A.C. hasn't worked in twenty years.

Probably never made a single person cold, but I can't say the same for me. I've done it many times.

Somebody take me home through those Alabama pines.

You can't drive through Talladega on a weekend in October. Head up north to Jacksonville. Cut around and over. Watch your speed in Boiling Springs.

They ain't got a thing to do. They'll get you every time.

Somebody take me home through those Alabama pines.

Somebody take me home through those Alabama pines.

If we pass through on a Sunday, better make a stop at Wayne's. It's the only open liquor store north, and I can't stand the pain of being by myself without a little help on a Sunday afternoon.

I needed that damn woman like a dream needs gasoline.

I tried to be some ancient kind of man,

one that's never seen the beauty in the world,

but I tried to chase it down... tried to make the whole thing  $\mbox{m}$  ine.

Somebody take me home through those Alabama pines. Somebody take me home through those Alabama pines.

I've been stuck here in this town, if you could call it that, a year or two.

I never do what I'm supposed to do.

I don't even need a name anymore.

When no one calls it out, it kinda vanishes away.

No one gives a damn about the things I give a damn about. The liberties that we can't do without seem to disappear like ghosts in the air.

When we don't even care, it truly vanishes away.
