

Let You Go

Jason Walker

Who said it's over just because,
You're too afraid to say it's not,
So where does that leave me?
What part of being torn apart,
Makes even any sense at all to you
Cause I can't see

I need to hear in black and white
That you don't need me now

Say you don't want me
That it's not like it was for you before
And say you don't love me
I'll turn around and walk right out the door
And let you go
Oh, I'll let you go

I'm ready for the very worst,
If that's the best you have to give to me
And I'll deal with that
But as long as there's a little doubt
As long as you don't say out loud
Those words, that I fear the most

So here's your chance
To fly or fall
To take a stand and show it all

Say you don't want me
That it's not like it was for you before
And say you don't love me
I'll turn around and walk right out the door
And let you go

But until you, you say that you wish
I wasn't close enough to reach,
There won't be a day
Where you can't say
Please tell me that I won't be there
That I won't be there for you
'Cause I'll be there
Yeah I'll be there for you

Say you don't want me
That it's not like it was for you before
And say you don't love me
I'll turn around and walk right out the door
I'll turn around and walk right out the door
And let you go
And let you go
