

You're Telling Me Sweet Lies Again

Jean Shepard

I thought any fool could be fooled only once that a burn child remembers the pain
Yet here I am listening with stars in my eyes you're telling me
sweet lies again
They're tender and soothing like a kiss to my heart I know that is healing in vain
The wound will be deepen you'll say we must part you're telling me sweet lies again

Let some angel or parry come rescue my heart Wave the one to change my fate that's so plain I'm lost in a transe or a spell I can't break you're telling me
sweet lies again
They sound so familiar like a book read before I know that the ending's the same
Some magic is holding me spell bound once more you're telling m e sweet lies again
