

The Man I Used To Be

Jellyfish

I hope you remember me, I was your daddy once, Wearing a sailor cap and dirty nails To you I'm just a picture on your mother's mantelpiece who chose to fight the good fight in time to fail into battle and in your shadow your daddy loves you still yes i do

I never thought it'd be so hard to see you grow so fast and turn into the man I used to be but I hope you have more sense than I in matters such as these medals don't mean shit when a family is lost at sea

I save every moment I've reached out and almost touched you but they all fade away must be a bad memory
