

The Places You Find Love

Jennifer Rush

It was raining when I met you
You were soaking wet,
No time to be impressed
I remember so much later on
I knew that you were someone
I would not forget

Everybody's searching,
Hungry for the glamour
You know too many hearts are in a hurry
But now matter how you try, you can't explain
The places you find love

Oh remember
In a flash the feeling can hit you
After all the times that I missed you
Reaching deep inside
To find your secret heart
Look around you notice you're flying
And for once you're not even trying
City lights below you like a million stars

I could feel it all around me
The need to find a place
Where sacred lovers wait
It's not money that buys happiness
It's not the shine of silver
That puts the heart to rest

Everybody's pushing,
The clock is always running
No one ever seems to have enough
When you least expect it
You come upon the places
You find love

Oh remember
In the poorest part of town
Where the sun never reaches the ground
And seeing's not believing, the feeling stays alive
Little children laughing and playing
'Cause they haven't learned to start hating
Never giving up, they still believe in love

Still believe, still believe, still believe in love
Still believe, still believe, still believe in love

Oh remember
In a flash the feeling can hit you...

Where the sun never reaches the ground
And seeing's not believing the feeling stays alive

Little children laughing and playing
'Cause they haven't learned to start hating
Never giving up, they still believe in love

Still believe, still believe, still believe in love...
