

About Her Eyes

Jerry Jeff Walker

About her eyes, now they're misty shinin'
About her hair, it's long and clean
About her face, now it's soft and smiling

But you can't trace her thoughts 'cause they can't be seen
When she flows by you so gently
She brings a breeze that just cleans the air
When she speaks it's barely a whisper
That tries to hide but you know it's there

She smiles at you and it sends you sailin'
It sweeps you yonder along in the night
You glide with ease and you hardly feel it
But you tell you're driftin' in a moments flight
When she leaves you become quite drowsy
So you recline in your easy chair
She's left you there to think in silence
About her eyes, her face, and her hair
