Seasons Change

Jerry Jeff Walker

There is less light and the night is longer now The air is full of something strange
No more at ease, the geese fly stronger now Because they know the seasons change

The gentle dove knows love is over now And wanderlust sets him aflame
My heart must start to play the rover now Because I know the seasons change

Summer's here and then it's gone
Spots are changing on the fawn
Spring and summer held my heart
But I can feel the winter tearing all of that apart

Through autumn leaves, I see your face right now Your dress is wet with the summer's rain And though we loved, I must erase you now Because I know the seasons change

You must understand Everything throughout the land Will be another color soon Winter breezes, autumn's moon

Our love is short, it cannot stay It came by night, gone by day The seasons change
