

Breaking Your Heart

Jessie James Decker

You sip on your coffee driving down streets of Tennessee
Whoa oh, whoa oh
I feel you watching me, planning our future and our dreams
Whoa oh, whoa oh
You reach for my hand but the light turns green
I was only seventeen

And now you're breaking my heart
I'm falling apart, turned my brown eyes sad and blue
I still think about you, hurts to think about you
And now you're breaking my heart
Alone in the dark, no one there to pull me through
I still think about you, hurts to think about you

You wrote me a letter asking if we could get together
Whoa oh, whoa oh
But it's seven years later
I'm not that young girl you remember
Whoa oh, whoa oh
Still saying all those things to me as I'm looking at my wedding ring

And now I'm breaking your heart
He's falling apart with those eyes so sad and blue
I still think about you, hurts to think about you
And now I'm breaking your heart
Alone in the dark, no one there to pull you through
I still think about you, hurts to think about you

You run away
Come back one day
Just like you always do

And now I'm breaking your heart
You're falling apart with those eyes so sad and blue
I still think about you
And now I'm breaking your heart alone in the dark
No one there to pull you through
I still think about you, hurts to think about you

And now I'm breaking your heart
You're falling apart with those eyes so sad and blue
I still think about you, hurts to think about you