It's the crack of noon
And I sit here watching you sleeping
I only wish that I could remember your name
But I know it's written on a matchbook somewhere
So maybe I'll find it, and maybe you'll care
Or maybe you'll fix me with one of those stares
And put up a fight

So when you awake I admit I'm relieved As you flash me a smile like a diamond And just for a moment I almost believe In love at first light

I propose a breakfast of coffee and aspirin You laugh, suggesting a raw egg or two But oh was it ever so good being bad Like a couple of vampires, deliciously mad Saying this is the best blood that we've ever had So we drank it all night

And if we untangle the webs that we weave Then maybe there's room for more laughter 'Cause just for a moment I almost believe In love at first light

Feeling cold

You put a robe round my shoulders

Smile and pull one of your favourite books from my shelf

Let's open the curtains and let out the dark

And if the sun doesn't melt us and there's still a spark

And we do something human like walk in the park

The spark could ignite

So maybe I'm moonstruck, or maybe naive But I know there's a God and a Devil So maybe I'm crazy enough to believe In love at first light
