In enemies' hands I don't have to measure I don't have to measure In enemies' hands I don't have to measure I don't have to measure up And I've seen a million eyes at once, staring as one You are the apple of my life There's no one but you in the world I'd choose You are what carries dark to light There is no excuse for being untrue In every sound is an above and below unfound The dance they do we all feel Above and below sensory input are two lovers disconnected by us So we have to join them in our actions We are the center of what one wants You are the apple of my life There's no one but you in the world I'd choose You are the sum and whole of life There is no one in the world but you and I You connect the earth to the sky And nothing comes between us Our bodies or minds Nothing disconnects us Not silence or time
