

The Man In The Station

John Martyn

There's a man in the station and a train in the rain
There's a face in the mirror that's showing the strain
There's a woman in the dark that's standing apart
There's a love in the man and it's breaking his heart
But it's alright, I'm catching the next train home
The next train home.

There's one more circle I'm dying to try
There's a piece of my head and it's asking me why
There's a piece of my heart that's dying to fly
There's a baby in a woman that's waiting to cry
But it's alright, I'm catching the next train home
The next train home.

There's got to be a way for a lazy face
To get off and start loving the human race
There's just got to be a way for a crazy face
Get out from under this paper chase
But it's alright, I'm catching the next train home
The next train home.

There's a man in the station and a train in the rain
There's a face in the mirror that's showing the strain
There's a woman in the dark, that's standing apart
There's a love in the man that's breaking his heart
But it's alright, I'm catching the next train home
The next train home.