

She

Jonathan Clay

And he's faking
And she's breaking
All over again

And he's lying
And he's trying
To make his way in

And the pictures
They haunt her
She can't let them go

Regardless
Of all that
She already knows

She's trying justifying
How she feels
But it's hard to do
When he won't be real
She's crying, half-denying
Every night
Searching for a sign
That she's doing it right
Right, that she's doing it right
Doing it right

And she wants to
Just get away
From all that's real

And she wishes
That she could say
The way she feels

'Cause they tell her that they're listening
And that she's not along
But the decisions that she's making
Well she knows they're not her own

She's got to get away
Got to get away
She's got to get away
Away from here for awhile

She's trying justifying
How she feels
But it's hard to do
When he won't be real
She's crying, half-denying
Every night
Searching for a sign
That she's doing it right
Right,
Doing it right
Doing it right.

She's trying justifying
How she feels
But it's hard to do
When he won't be real
Every night
Searching for a sign
Searching for a sign
She's doing it right
