

By the time I heard
They told me you were gone
It nearly sent me through the floor
A thousand times I thought
I still don't understand
What you were living for
I felt the pain build up inside of me
Once through the door you walk away
The other side you can be free
I took a look inside of all the dreams you had
And all the talent that was gone
But now my life keeps moving
Knowing all the way
Your memory is living on
Since you left I had to search through all the blame
The string of lies that you were fed
Some people just don't get their actions have a price
Playing games with others head
