Perfect

Jughead's Revenge

now that you threw it in I understand how fast you time runs out life has cheated you so what nothing ever goes as planned some people tell you everything that you want to hear fact is a day-job and a complex only kept them there you can wait there standing in that line it's easy to blame somebody else you have your whole like to do something and that's not a lot of time in a perfect world we wouldn't spend our time doing something that we should I was sad to see you go but if anything it taught me something that I didn't know you better get off you ass while you still have time
