Old Time Sake

Kathleen Edwards

Of all the things that you could choose to say "Baby come home with me for old time sake" "Stand by my side and flash me that smile" "Everybody is out tonight"

So I called you up from god knows where Would you lie in bed if I were there Speak soft, just talk I will listen Don't you dare leave till the morning Like you always do

Follow me down through the streets of the states Make up a reason not to come for old time sake Nothing in this town could ever change Except maybe new lines on your face

So I called you up from god knows where Would you lie in bed if I were there Speak soft, just talk I will listen Don't you dare leave till the morning Like you always do
