

Butterfly

Katie Herzig

I am a butterfly I sleep so silent
I land upon the light
So I can see the color of my wings

Always fly away to find another
All that to make me stay put on my wings
the color always stays

No matter where I fly
No matter who I land on
Can I expect to change when I was born this way?
What do I expect to lose, when I land on you?

You're much too bright for me I cannot take it I'll stay indefinitely until I feel my wings begin to burn
You don't belong with me,
But I am taking this piece of revelry until I feel ever wide awake

No matter where I fly
No matter who I land on,
Can I expect to change when I was born this way?
What do I expect to lose, when I land on you?

I will never change for you
I will never change for you
I'm not the same without you
I am a butterfly I sleep so silent
I land upon the light
So I can see the color of my wings
