

Wading In Deeper

Katzenjammer

The summer has ended quietly surrendered Laying its weapons on the ground 'round her feet
The chimes they are calling, the leaves they are falling to cover this land with their innocent lives Lalalala, wading in deeper Lalalala, up to her knees

Two hands that are white, can't put up the fight Bereft of all strength and the flames in her eyes
The infant, the damage, the plunder, the pillage
Her ruins of smoke, this river can't choke

Lalalala, wading in deeper
Lalalala, up to her waist

The fall is a'coming, closer each morning it snarls at her heels and breathes down her neck
A raven is calling Promethean warning The ties to her arms and her legs pull her down

Lalalala, wading in deeper
Lalalala, over her head