Endless

Kavinsky

They say a flap of a butterfly's wing can doom your fate That the roads sometimes take backward what they had given But true love never dies And now you know how the legend of the dead cruiser was born

But what you don't know Is there's a gap between living and dying Some say they've seen the dead cruiser in a flash of lightning around the shadowy curves of the highway Some say he was just a kid who met his fate in a fiery crash But anyone fool enough to venture out onto to that treacherous road should know one thing There's no turning back