It came along in one concrete form A knowledge that turned me upside down Let us put it this way: a new experience Of living a life without me as I Accept the nature and origin Of our human condition Believe that something defective Flows down inside the blood of mine Not a best thing to do, from the world's mindframe To see all my pride diminishing Given away this kind of strength once I had To be replaced by a thing called faith Accept the nature and origin Of our undisputable weakness Believe in something invincible To take control of my whole Accept the nature and origin Of our undisputable weakness Believe in something invincible To take over my self