The Last Horizon

KenZiner

We're all seated, it's our last night Last ones to go, prepared for the flight Motors are roaring, no one can stay

If there's a new home, please tell me now I should believe but I don't know just how New life in darkness, no night or day

The countdown is over, we fly Through the clouds towards the space Away from the place Where we have spent all of our days

Grim faces stare at me I need to keep their spirits high Never surrender, never forget There's no other way: just try Find a meaning, find a cause Strive to reach a peace of mind We must fight, we must survive The banner bearers of mankind

Behold the last horizon It's clear, the end is near On this decisive moment We set our course towards the great unknown

The last horizon (Where do we go?) Crimson horizon (Find a new home) We are lost forever (The great unknown) We dream of a new beginning

And now we understand We knew all the time but we always stayed our hand Too late, too late to change the course For years and years we have poisoned our source

We fly towards new stars In search of home refugees Can't hide their scars We can't reverse the flow of sand We burned our land, drove mankind to exile

Behold the last horizon

The last horizon (Where do we go?) Crimson horizon (Find a new home) We are lost forever (The great unknown) The last horizon

And now we understand The extent of our crime When the globe lies far behind Too late to understand To change our course We burned our land, exiled ourselves This is the end)