Ballad Of A Salesman Who Sold Himself

Kevin Ayers

There was moonlight and laughter That danced on the sands And bloodstained pianos Are played without hands

Such a promising music Sweet whispers and dreams From a traveling window, The salesman who screamed.

Moonlight, Saturday night It's now or never Oh play Stormy Weather, for me, for me.

I lived in the flower shop Called "Love is So Sweet!" And I get all my kicks From the customers` feet.

Well, I`m just a stranger, None stranger than I. My head in the quicksand My feet in the sky.

I was carefully crazy When playing the game. `Cause business is business And I`m not to blame.

Climb on my back
It`s a wet afternoon;
A bottle of booze,
A bit of a tune to sing;
Goodbye, everything;
Goodbye, everything