

You Are The Daybreak

Kevin Devine

It's going straight to my head
I think I'm falling in love again
Some simple miracles have happend
Since your steady hands have come
And stopped my unraveling

Your fingers built for the piano
Work out the knots that line my back
The stress I've stored since last December
But now it doesn't matter
I've learned to leave it in my past

I feel good about the future
This clarity I've never had
You are the bounce in my step
The burst of blood in my chest
The prayer I've kept in my head

You are the knock in my knees
The slow sound of each song
I scribble down and tear up
Because they never match up
You are the words I fumble

And in the morning you are the daybreak
And I am glad
And at night you are the dream
I fall asleep to have