

Black eye-sockets of the forest mires
Staring in the distant icy edges
And into the sky and crystal stars
That still treasure wisdom of the ages

Ancient world is muffling up its bones
And revealing secrets just to me,
Sleeping to the music of the horns,
Hoping for the better times to be