

Two Little Girls

King Diamond

One little girl with dirty fingers
Playing with broken doll
As the other girl is lying
Digging deep into the ground

They seem to play an evil game
A game that doesn't have a name
Both of them are in the ashes
At the stake where witches burn

If only they could see beyond the ground they play on
The girls are laughing still, they think they're having fun
They should be far away, watching the sun go down

One little girl picked up a necklace
From the ashes of the witches
It had wings and then the other cried out loud "Now let me have it"

The other looked without a sigh
Right into the witch's eye
The kind of horror that she saw
Made her choke forevermore

I wish they could have seen beyond the ground they played on
They would be laughing still, having the best of fun
They would be far away watching the sun go down