

A Song For Brittany

King the Kid

Always looking for a better
Way to hold together
The crack that separates the end from the start
But all her doubts wear her out
And she drives just to breathe, drives just to breathe

But is it madness, that keeps her stuck on the ground
And in her silence, she really begging for sound

She left behind
Simple times
Growing up way too fast
But now there's nothing holding her back

So enoughs, enough
Enough live free
You're in control

Life's a roller coaster under city lights
And the blur
It makes you wonder, (you wonder)
Everything you've left behind has helped you find
You are so much stronger

Everybody's heart breaks, everybody falls down
Sticks and stones baby won't break your bones
You think you're on your own
Well Brittany, you're not alone

So it smells of wine and cigarettes

She broke another promise

The pressures building up

Around and around

She's worn out

From a town

That's been holding her in, holding her in

But is it madness, that keeps her stuck on the ground

And in her silence, she really begging for sound

She's at a loss

For a cause that's been dragging her down

But now there's nothing holding her back

Life's a roller coaster under city lights

And the blur

It makes you wonder, (you wonder)

Everything you've left behind has helped you find

You are so much stronger

Everybody's heart breaks, everybody falls down

Sticks and stones baby won't break your bones

You think you're on your own

Well Brittany, you're not alone

Well Brittany, you're not alone!

You know what you want,

You know what you need

No need to stay in New Jersey

Pull your hopes out of your dreams to where they belong

To where they belong.

Life's a roller coaster under city lights

And the blur

It makes you wonder, (you wonder)

Everything you've left behind has helped you find

You are so much stronger

Everybody's heart breaks, everybody falls down

Sticks and stones baby won't break your bones

Well Brittany, you're not alone.
