

Her White Dress

Kingfisher Sky

She stares into the distance watches the sea
the waves come crashing in surrounding me
She waits for a new day and suddenly
the wind starts to rage

The world around her passes by like her old wedding dress that flew into the sky It's time to take off and don't look back so turn another page

One minute everything would be different one second everything would be right Eyes wide open my immaculate one and look at the first ray of light

She stares into the distance watches the sea
the waves come crashing in surrounding me
She waits for a new day and suddenly
the wind starts to rage

One minute everything would be different
one second everything would be right
Eyes wide open my immaculate one
and look at the first ray of light

One minute everything would be different
one second everything would be right
Eyes wide open my immaculate one
and look at the first ray of light

One minute everything would be different
one second everything would be right
Eyes wide open my immaculate one
and look at the first ray of light

She waits for a new day and suddenly
the wind starts to rage