

Living As Strangers

Kitty Wells

We can't go on living as strangers knowing we once loved each other so
Your lips used to be so warm and tender but lately they are growing cold
We're living as strangers strangers in our home

The vows we made together have turned into regret
We're living as strangers there's no more love at all
It's over now we might as well forget

So tenderly you told me that you love me
But that was when our love was sweet and new
But now since we've been living as strangers we both must realize our love is through We're living as strangers...
