Father, Father

Kool & The Gang

Father, where's the love I thought there would be? Where's the happiness in me? Is life just an endless walk to nowhere? With streets that just lead to dead ends? Where parents water their flowers with hate And children do the same But who's to blame? Spring? No, it's just a gentle thing But man flies around the moon and sings a song that stars with June And eats his lunch at every moon In harmony he does this But with love, is out of tune

Father, father, father, you were surely right If the world should end tomorrow It would be by man's own might Lord have mercy on us Seems to be a favorite line Wherever we're down or in trouble Or blocks to eternal divine

Father, there's war and worry Lord, there's hurt and sorrow And won't you live to see tomorrow

Father, father, father, what can we do what's right Lord, please smile upon us Give us your guiding light

What can we do what's right Lord, please smile upon us Give us your guiding light

Father, where's the love I thought there would be? Where's the happiness in me?

Lord, you know, I know you know, father
