

Like a mirror, the lake reflects the sunset I set afloat a leaf and watch it flow Sorrow, anger and emptiness get forgotten I raise my eyes to the vast sky

Lost a short while ago, remembered in the tenderness, now, I've shattered your reflection

And now, the wings touch my cheeks the clouds are swept away I' ll throw into the air the memories that occupy my heart

How sweet it was to be young gentle words, were easy to believe

Those tears that were held back compared to this solitude mean nothing I place them on my hands to blow them away

And now, the wings touch my cheeks the sky is falling down I'll dissolve in the water those memories that occupy my heart

Lost a short while ago, remembered in the tenderness, now, I've
shattered your reflection

And now, the wings touch my cheeks the clouds are swept away I'
ll throw into the air the memories that occupy my heart