

Burning Up

Ladytron

I wrote a protest song about you, about you
Set off on the long march without you, without you

Set off on the long march without you, without you
I wrote a protest song about you, about you
About what's left that lies between us, I'm walking
So many things worth burning for

I set myself on fire without you, without you
I wrote a protest song about you, about you
That not a soul was meant to hear, except you

I wrote a protest song about you, about you
I cheated gravity to chase you, to chase you
And through the burning space between us, you're falling
You have a long way, long way to fall

I set myself on fire without you, without you
I wrote a protest song about you, about you
That not a soul was meant to hear, except you

So many things worth burning for
So many things worth burning for
So many things worth burning for
So many things worth burning for
So many things worth burning for
So many things worth burning for
So many things worth burning for...
