Lyin' Goat

Saw kingdoms crushed and crumbled Saw the earth from the rim of a ship Heard the whistle of the damnation train But I didn't see her coming

Baby clear sky light That lyin' goat borrowed my heart and now it's broke With big guns booming like thunder I should have struck him cemetery dead

41 dollars and 63 cents won't buy my way out of this mess 41 dollars and 63 cents won't get me a dress to compete with he r best God made woman when he took out a bone Gave it to adam so he wasn't alone Fell at his feet - a heap on the floor Now he aint coming back no more

I saw him on the lake at Galilee The ship was gliding away from me Sails unfurled in the evening breeze The white caps marbleized into peaks The wind is a woman and the water is too The moon he holds the reins of the tides With big guns booming like thunder I should have struck him cemetery dead
