

We Had The World

Lana Lane

Sailing on a ship across the silver seas to lands unknown
The moon would guide us through till light of day
All the treasures buried deep from kingdoms lost would shine like beacons
Now their fires slowly fade away

I remember it all

We had the world
We had the night and day
We had it all, but somehow it slipped away
We had the world
We had the rising sun
We had it all, but quickly it's over and done
We had the world

Dancing in our golden halls we'd drink from goblets filled with wine
And sing of future prophecies to come
Battles won with swords of stone, and flags of silk that burned so brightly
But now our tapestry has come undone

I remember it all

We had the world
We had the night and day
We had it all, but somehow it slipped away
We had the world
We had the rising sun
We had it all, but quickly it's over and done
We had the world

Sailing on a ship across the silver seas to lands unknown
The moon would guide us through till light of day
As we say goodbye to earth and sea and sky and fires burning
Watch us as we slowly fade away

I remember it all

We had the world
We had the night and day
We had it all, but somehow it slipped away
We had the world
We had the rising sun
We had it all, but quickly it's over and done
We had the world
Oh, We had the world
Oh, We had the world
