

Used To Be

Lansdowne

There you were, standing out against the night.
Shining just the way you did, years ago and I couldn't move.
Couldn't take another breath.
Suddenly the memories were all that I had left.

I wasn't ready back then.
Now I'd give anything, to be there for you.

Even after all this time, I think about when you were mine.
Remembering what it felt like the way we used to be.
Laying under the stars, way back when the world was ours.
Remembering what it felt like the way we used to be.

The screen door slammed and you begged me not to go.
Walking out on you that night how was I to know?
That every step, every second I left best not a chance to make things right
Again and not a chance to get you back.

I wasn't ready back then.
Now I'd give anything, to be there for you.

Even after all this time, I think about when you were mine.
Remembering what it felt like the way we used to be.
Laying under the stars, way back when the world was ours.
Remembering what it felt like the way we used to be.

Pictures start to fade (I've done my best to change).
Don't tell me it's too late.
Is it too late?

Even after all this time, I think about when you were mine.
Remembering what it felt like the way we used to be.
Laying under the stars, way back when the world was ours.
Remembering what it felt like the way we used to be.

Remembering what it felt like the way we used to be.
Remembering what it felt like the way we used to be.
I'll be there for you
