Is there anybody here but me

Laura Branigan

Sitting in 'la castlette' The same place we first met Trying to talk it out before 'the fall' You look the other way I struggle for the words to say Feels like I'm talking to the wall I can here them play our song But somehow it sounds all wrong In a lost romance, dancing a lonely dance With a heart that doesn't beat as much Fingers that have lost their touch Looking into eyes that just don't see We dance a little loud at times I laugh when I feel like crying Is there anybody here but me Two silhouettes in the dark So close, so far apart Going through the motions of the past The night is coming to an end It's getting harder to pretend But still we try to keep this love alive With a heart that doesn't beat as much Fingers that have lost their touch Looking into eyes that just don't see We dance a little loud at times I laugh when I feel like crying Is there anybody here but me Never dreamed what we started could end like this Lovers saying goodbye with a stranger's kiss With a heart that doesn't beat as much Fingers that have lost their touch Looking into eyes that just don't see We dance a little loud at times I laugh when I feel like crying Is there anybody here but me Is there anybody here but me Is there anybody here but me