

Ghost You Know

Lauren Hoffman

There's a room in my house where I stumble over a memory
There's a light in the night and I wonder if you've come back for me

Well it's a little too late to say sorry, but don't be so hard on me
Ghost, you know I can't go back

Come like a whisper in silence, a brush on my skin the shadow that flies by my door, but I'm wanting more

Well it's a little too late to say sorry, but don't be so hard on me
Ghost, you know I can't go back

Like a song in my ear you are near me, here like a time machine
Ghost you keep pulling me back

Well If you've been here all the while, watching me drift by and by Waiting for something to fill me up, ghost close your eyes

I can silence the voice in my head and hear you instead
Whisper and sing for me again, rise from the dead

Well it's a little too late to say sorry, but don't be so hard on me
Ghost, you know I can't go back

Like a song in my ear you are near me, here like a time machine
Ghost you keep pulling me back

Sometimes you lose everything, or gave it away well it's hard to say now
