

Confess My Love

Leah

Heavy is the metal, heavy is the leather Ready in this armor, constricting my heart
Helmet in my hand, greaves around my thighs Rumors of destruction, here to say goodbye

Dreams of glory fading, Dreams of love thrown down This is the spear you throw into me, I fall to my knees
This is the arrow you drove into me, as I confessed my love

Steel plates upon my chest can't stop the bleeding Despite all the training for this moment in time
Night is come, a moonlit knife embraces my side Vision dim, closing in, I see through glazing eyes
Dreams of glory fading, Dreams of love thrown down

This is the spear you throw into me, I fall to my knees This is the arrow you drove into me, as I confessed my love

This is the conquest, a bloodless heart still beating This is the triumph, strangled lungs still breathing
This is the victory, the silent voice still screaming This is reality, blackened wounds still healing

As I confess my love...