

Small Yellow Chair

Leatherface

If the length of this song is my life then I wanna live it
I wanna lie in the sun one more time and not hide in all I have
And squander good times I want to be in the longest day of all time

To see what I find to see what I find
I'll never leave you and I can't imagine life not knowing you
All that time that I spent searching do you know what I mean
The first photograph of you that's the one
Where I couldn't make you out and now look at you
The first time that you laughed I could have cried
Laugh at me any time

I'm near you and I need you more than you'll ever do
And I'm near you

You have a small yellow chair and don't seem to care
That people can be mean and you know what I mean
Everyday you are teaching me things
I must have done something so right it would seem So right it would seem

That you are everything that I should be Everything that I need in my life and I will die another time
You are all of my life and I will die another time
