

Fire In Your Skin

Lethal

Twisting and turning
Your face to the wall
Your future was soaring
The landing was hard

Your conscience would take no resistance
You found a way out
The threshold of freedom was calling
Can I pull you out?

I found out you've fallen in the shadows
The morning will find you in your sorrow

Guarding your space for surveillance
When changes come fast
But calls of the night are contagious
And easy to grasp

I found out you've fallen in the shadows
The morning will find you in your sorrow
And I know how it feels

Do you remember the fire in your skin?
That you tried to dismember
With the cold of December
When I looked into your eyes
I saw fear in your stare
Your body was standing before me
But your soul was not there

Stealing the rain from your thunder
You wear the disguise
I knew all along you were trying
To taste your own blood

Circles are closing around you
Forming your shield
Statues of friends fall behind you
How long can you stand

I found out you've fallen in the shadows
The morning will find you in your sorrow
And I know how it feels
