

Dreamcatcher

Liferuiner

In a world that's created such an unforgiving platform for life
Where do these second chances come from that I so desperately seek

And from what I recall the world I know wants nothing to do with me

Nothing to do with me

There is only so much you can give
Until giving, becomes giving up

If we were just giving in till the point we get stuck
Then what's the point in giving a fuck

I know the problems with growing up
And half the battle is just showing up
You need to believe in the dreams worth waking up for
You need to believe that there's something more
Something worth living for

If you can't be the change you want to see in the world then why are you alive x2

I know the problems with growing up
And half the battle is just showing up
You need to believe in the dreams worth waking up for
You need to believe that there's something more
Something worth living for

There's something worth living for