

Burning Down

Link 80

A place that I could go to,
no longer welcomes me,
outcasted and rejected,
I never thought I'd leave.
No longer is it sacred,
it's tainted through and through,
I thought that it was differen,
now I know that isn't true...
You wear on your sleeve,
I wear it in my heart,
you were so quick to finish,
I have yet to start...
Something far to perfect,
is never what it seems,
the reality I wanted,
lives only in my dreams.
It's so sad that your life revolves around a fad, you're burning down your future while you build up your past...

The unity they sold to me, was an ugly f*cking lie.
They've cast me out, and I've seen the truth 'cos I opened my eyes...
A fatasty I lived in has now crashed back to the ground,
now nothing looks the same, it's all been turned around.
I thought that I could live it and change the way things are,
but I lived that way for years, and nothing's changed so far.
It took so long to build it, this home I thought I'd found, but where there's smoke there's fire, and now it's burning down
.