

Strong Enough To Cry

Lorrie Morgan

You don't have to hold it all inside you
Or try to keep your feelings hid
You don't need to bottle your emotions
Of the way your daddy did

I can see inside you're hurtin'
Even though your eyes are dry
If you let a tear roll down your cheek
Honey, that don't mean you're weak
You're just strong enough to cry

They're not just little drops of water
That show the way you feel
They turn coal into diamonds
And iron into steel

I know you think that you'll be weaker
If a tear falls from your eye
Oh, but you don't understand
A woman needs a man
Who's is strong enough to cry

Every rock that we can lean on
It's not just shaped out of stone
It didn't get that way by settin'
Their dry as a bone

It took a million years of changin'
As the rain fell on it from the sky
You want to be that rock for me
Honey, I need you to be strong enough to cry

They're not just little drops of water
That show the way you feel
They turn coal into diamonds
And iron into steel

I know you think that you'll be weaker
If a tear falls from your eye
Oh, but you don't understand
A woman needs a man
Who's is strong enough to cry

Honey, you don't understand
A woman needs a man
That's strong enough to cry