

Janey

Lou Rhodes

Janey she died
In a search of coming home
And how we cried
For all we might have done
But she lost the fight
To find her chosen one
And fill the space
She couldn't fill alone

And there was a boy
Who longed for solitude
In wilderness he found his soul's food
But the seed that fed his light
Brought his body's death
And he missed the world
As he took his final breath

It's only human to yearn for
Something more
But it's finding nothingness that brings us all we're
Searching for

And so I find myself
Between their two extremes
Amidst the wreck
Of all these broken dreams
But illusion falls
Only when it's pushed
And troubled times
Turn it all to dust

It's only human to yearn for
Something more
But it's finding nothingness that brings us all we're
Searching for

Yeah it's only human to yearn for
Something more
But it's finding nothingness that brings us all we're
Searching for
