Walls

Louis Tomlinson

Nothing wakes you up like waking up alone And all that's left of us is a cupboard full of clothes The day you walked away and took the higher ground Was the day that I became the man that I am now But these high walls, they came up short Now I stand taller than them all These high walls never broke my soul, and I I watched them all come falling down I watched them all come falling down for you For you Nothing makes you hurt like hurting who you love (Hurting who y ou love) And no amount of words will ever be enough (Never be enough) I looked you in the eyes, saw that I was lost (Saw that I was l ost) For every question 'why', you were my 'because' (You were my 'b ecause') But these high walls came up short Now I stand taller than them all These high walls never broke my soul, and I I watched them all come falling down I watched them all come falling down for you Falling down for you So this one is a thank you for what you did to me Why is it that 'thank yous' are so often bittersweet I just hope I see you one day and you'll say to me, oh, oh But these high walls came up short Now I stand taller than them all These high walls never broke my soul, and I I watched them all come falling down I watched them all come falling down for you

Nothing wakes you up like waking up alone

Falling down for you
