

Summer '08

Lucy Spraggan

Summer that contained a thousand kisses
The morning smell of tiny ten
No forgives and no forgets
The way to live with no regrets but one

I would have cherished those lips that blew me away
For as long as I could have them for Setting up in a perfect spot
Friend sleeping wherever they drop, that's love

I worship the ground where you laid your head
And I pretended that I didn't care
I kept you on the night we kissed
The perfect eyes, the perfect bliss, oh yeah

And if you knew, what I go through every single day
You'd take my breath away
'Cause if you knew, what I go through every single day
You'd take me back to Summer '08

Years pass slowly, all the memories fade
But this fire burns a tiny flame
It represents the same old life
The thought never a night will be the same

Trees swing in as the winds roll round
But the weather never stopped us then
There's nowhere else I'd rather be
Than drifting with the same old leaves again

Memories fade but your heart beats
And you can never change the same old song
Maybe if I let you know,
Explain that there's been too much snow
You'd turn around, reverse my love,
I'd never have to feel this cold again

But if you knew, what I go through every single day
You'd take my breath away
'Cause if you knew, what I go through every single day
You'd take me back to Summer '08

'Cause if you knew, what I go through every single day
You'd take my breath away
'Cause if you knew, what I go through every single day
You'd take me back to Summer '08
