how can you justify your pain (why do you justify your pain) when every one has felt the same how can you walk around so dead (why do you walk around so dead) with good days gone and more ahead (with good days gone and more ahead) with one look you take the idle minds that lay before you and give something they can touch and they can feel and in the end you'll have the memories that few could dream off so with these words i say can't you see that your life's just begun how can you let the days go by (why do you let the days go by) with no excuse no alibi how can you fall when you don't climb (how can you fall when you don't climb) the fear of heights has left you blind (the fear of heights has left you blind) with one look you take the idle minds that lay before you and give something they can touch and they can feel and in the end you'll have the memories that few could dream off so with these words i say can't you see that your life's just begun i see you're life has just begin why can't i be free with one look you take the idle minds that lay before you and give something they can touch and they can feel and in the end you'll have the memories that few could dream off so with these words i say can't you see that your life's just begun
