

Heroes

Majesty

There was a strong man, who fought for his believes.
Died on the battlefield with honor, not with grief.

There was a rebel who fought the evil force.
He took the crown, became the leader of the north.

There was a young man, only 15 years of age.
But felt honor in his heart, became a leader not a slave.

There was a servant, who didn't want to serve.
Well, he was killed but his rebel call was heard.

Warrior, you heard a call
Guiding you to the brave men's hall.
To the brave men's hall.

Heroes have burdens to bear.
Heroes can't be found everywhere.

There was a father, the evil asked what he could give.
He gave his own life, so his family could live.

There was a soldier, on the frontline he did kill.
Defends his people with proud heart and iron will.

There was a coward man, who flew from the attack.
He grew old a hundred years, but he died weak in his bed.

There was a hero, who fought with steel. All Hail!!!
Well, he died young but for thousand years they told his tale.

Warrior, you heard a call
Guiding you to the brave men's hall.
To the brave men's hall.

Heroes have burdens to bear.
Heroes can't be found everywhere.

Born to be a Hero, I'll fight against their lies.
For my sisters, for my brothers I would give my life.
So if my clan is calling, my sword is on your side.
For glory and for freedom. For wisdom and for might.

Heroes have burdens to bear.
Heroes can't be found everywhere.

I'll always live adventure, returning to the fields.
I'm born to reign in glory, I'll always fight for steel.
BORN TO BE A HERO

I'd rather die in battle than run away and pray.
When my bones are dieing, my deeds will all prevail.
BORN TO BE A HERO

We are a sacred army, the troops of iron pride.
We're here to kill deceivers, deceivers we will fight.
BORN TO BE A HERO

When we die in battle, I know where we will go.
The gods up in Valhalla await their sacred sons
BORN TO BE A HERO
