

Stay In The Sun

Make Do and Mend

What does it mean when it doesn't shine like it did when we were 18?

You were the trees that kept the pouring rain from falling down on me.

And I know that it got cold,
But I hung everything I owned along your limbs.
Now my spit's dried to the pavement,
And my lashes are stuck wet to their lids.
You can click your heels until you wear holes in the floor
And realize that no place feels like home anymore.
So even if we find ourselves further than before,
An empty fate is just an even score.

Commit or hate yourself,
Bury in or break yourself,
It's coming loose or never going home.
We spent out better days alone
With only gas receipts and highway eyes to show
That there's nothing else that we could ever do.

What comes and goes always goes too soon.
You can click your heels until you wear holes in the floor
And realize that no place feels like home anymore.
So even if we find ourselves further than before,
An empty fate is just an even score.
Is just an even score.
It's just an even score.

What does it mean when it doesn't shine like it did when we were 18?

'Cause there's nothing else that we could ever do.
What comes and goes always goes too soon.

You can click your heels until you wear holes in the floor
And realize that no place feels like home anymore.
So even if we find ourselves further than before,
An empty fate is just an even score
